

Introduction & Business Problem introduction:

I am living in country that suffering an economical crisis that affect whole people life. Here is plenty of problems that we face it. one of them is banking system. banks are powerful organs in government and their branches are one of their assets that play important role in economic. in this report I want to discuss about one of those problems banks face with. I mean number of branches of different banks. last summer I had noticed that here is unusual number of banks branches in my hometown. then I thought that are those number of banks necessary in a small city like where I was living? are these numbers in Arak city is the same in a developed country like Germany? Are these numbers reasonable when we face with a economical crisis and coronavirus effects? how many branches are in Arak city? And we compare number of banks with number of restaurants to answer this question that “are we have more banks or more restaurants” because we need jobs and business more than useless banks branches especially in a economical crisis. And I will conclude that these unusual number of banks can be a sign of some kind of lake of management .

Target Audience

Main target audience is Government services and economical activists and researchers.

and results can be use by government systems to improve economical situation by manage these resources and use them to make productive activities and business to improve unemployment crisis.